THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

SIR JOHN NEWPORT, Bart.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF HIS MAJESTY'S EXCHEQUER.

Sir,

As the Records from which this translation is taken are in your custody, and as the work has been performed under your immediate direction, I trust that I may be permitted thus briefly to express my obligations for the uniform kindness and confidence with which you have been pleased to favour me throughout the whole of the undertaking.

The disinterested and patriotic proposal to publish this work at your own expense (had the Government not been disposed to lend its assistance) ought to be generally known and duly appreciated; for such an example of public zeal is a decisive characteristic of an honourable mind; it would, however, ill become me to say anything that might be thought presumption on the one hand, and, although true, might bear the complexion of flattery on the other.

Thus, Sir, it is only left for me to subscribe myself, with a full sense of every feeling of gratitude and respect,

Your most obedient and obliged Servant,

FREDERICK DEVON.

INTRODUCTION.

The Lord Treasurer's Exitus, or Issue Roll, of the 44th year of the reign of King Edward III., has been selected for publication from a series of those Rolls, preserved in the ancient Pell Office or Tally Court of the Exchequer, not only on account of the interesting period of our history to which it relates, but because, from the perfect state of its preservation, it is well calculated to exhibit a specimen of the valuable information contained in these documents; a very limited knowledge of which is to be obtained from the early writers on records of this description.

The utility and importance of the records preserved in the above repository must be evident from the abundant historical materials to be found in them, even upon a superficial glance; it may therefore be desirable in the first place to endeavour to trace their history and formation, and to explain the reason why they have not hitherto been made known and rendered available to the public, as a legal, literary, and historical treasure.

Madox, in his learned and laborious History of the Exchequer,* published in 1769, it is true, refers to the clerkship of the pells as being ancient, and to a pell or counter pell roll of the 9th of Henry III. as then in the custody of the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, from which he makes some short extracts,* stating it to be the most ancient roll of that description; and adds, that in the 35th year of Henry III. he found a Pell roll called the Great Roll of the Receipt, and in the 5th and 9th years of King Edward II., two rolls called Pells of the Memorandums of the Receipt of the Exchequer; but this is the only reference he gives to these records.

The scanty knowledge possessed by Mr. Madox of these muniments, and the impossibility of his availing himself of their utility, are fully explained in his Report made to the "Lords' Committees, appointed by the House of Lords to view and consider the Public Records, in 1718," where, speaking of the records in the Exchequer, he says, "In some of these said offices there are important valuable records, that lie in a sort buried; and in all of them there are many records that remain in confusion, for want of means to defray the charges of digesting them. In the brick tower there are two rooms or garrets, one a large room, the floor of it covered with books and loose parchments: there are also two ground rooms; the one is a large square room, having many parchments and books lying in dust on the floor, and otherwise; the other is a much smaller room, wherein parchments and tallies have lain in disorder for many years past; no officer (that I can find) claims these two rooms, or either of them; they are seldom opened, never for the purpose of searching."

The foregoing account of the state of these records, by Mr. Madox in 1718, is confirmed by two subsequent Reports in 1731, made by the auditor and deputy auditor of the Exchequer to the honourable committee appointed to view the Cottonian Library and public records of the kingdom, who state "that Thomas Madox, Esq., and William Soley, Gent., were appointed to digest and arrange the said records, and make exact schedules or repertories thereof. But the Lord High Treasurer (then Earl of Oxford) being soon after removed from his office, and the said Mr. Madox being in an ill state of health, and since dead, nothing was done therein, and the records in the large dark square room up one pair of stairs over the Court of Exchequer, and also in one small room up two pair of stairs adjoining the Court of Exchequer, commonly called the brick tower, fronting New Palace Yard, were reported to lye in great disorder." In this condition they have continued until lately, when the present Comptroller General, Sir John Newport, wishing to rescue this valuable collection of records from decay and destruction, was pleased to call the attention of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to their importance, and the Editor had the honour of receiving their Lordships' commands, under the direction of the said Comptroller General of the Exchequer, to arrange and digest them into order, and make their contents known in a way which would render them accessible and useful to the public.

* Madox, Hist. Exch. p. 742.

On pursuing the inquiry into the history of these records, there is strong reason to suspect that the period when they were first permitted to lie neglected was that of the Commonwealth, as, from a partial schedule of them, to be found among the Lansdown MSS., No. 254, which is placed at the beginning of this volume, they appear to have been regularly arranged to the end of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and must, at that period at least, have been sufficiently known to be rendered useful for the routine of the official business of the day. This conjecture is strengthened by a reference made to the importance and utility of these records, by Vernon, in his rare and useful book entitled "Considerations for regulating the Exchequer," published in 1642, and so often quoted as an authority by Chief Baron Gilbert, and by modern writers on the Court of Exchequer: and as it is the only treatise extant on the antiquity of this branch of the Exchequer, it may not be deemed irrelevant to cite the author in his own quaint though explicit language:—

"Howbeit* thus much I may say, that there are so many excellent records in the offices of the two remembrancers, clerk of the pipe, and in the several Treasuries, both in the upper AND LOWER Exchequer, as they may indeed be called Treasuries where those records are kept, they being the greatest treasure of the kingdom; insomuch as I have heard a great lawyer say that he never understood what law was, till he came up those staires. And, to say the truth, there must needs bee more than ordinary matters, and great variety of them found in that Court, whither all the other Courts of the Kingdom, as rivers to the sea, in some kind or other have their resort."

Then speaking of the officers who had the custody of these records, he says:

"The officers in the inferior or lower Exchequer, commonly called the Receipt, are these which follow, viz.

"The four tellers of the receipt.

* Vernon's Exchequer, p. 41, 42.

"The clerk of the pell (whose office is in the Lord Treasurer's gift) keepeth the Pells in parchment, called Pelles Receptæ, wherein every teller's bill, with his name on it, is to be entred; and under every such bill when it is entred, recordatur to be written in open court, for a controlment to charge the teller with so much money as in the said bill is set downe.

"He also anciently kept another pell, called PELLIS EXITUS, wherein every dayes issuing of any the moneyes paid into the receipt, was to be entred, and by whom and by what warrant, privy seale, or bill, it was paid. The auditor of receipt (whose office is in the Lord Treasurer's gift) taketh up every teller's parchment bill after it is marked recordatur by the clerk of the pell, and entered by the controllers of the pell (who were anciently also to make entry thereof in a counter pell,) and fileth it upon a file; and then his clerk, that is called scriptor Talliar. and Contratalliar. writeth double upon every tally. And the said auditor doth also enter all the said parchment bills in a booke, which is to him as pelles receptæ, and maketh certificate thereof to the Lord Treasurer, &c.

"And as there is no officer in the superior Exchequer solely trusted, so it is most evident that in the inferior court there is to be a concurrence of many officers in the trust: for the teller's bill is not delivered to the party which pays the money, nor trusted with any one officer to charge the said teller therewith, but is entered with the clerk of the pell and with the controllers of the pell, and again entered with the auditor of the receipt who files the same. All which caution (without doubt) hath been by the great wisedom and experience of our ancestors found necessary; so as I may conclude this point with Gervasius Tilburiensis, that no officer is solely trusted with the King's revenues, no not the Treasurer himself; and the reason which he gives for it is, that besides the controlment of the great roll (being the Treasurer's roll) by the Chancellor's roll, there was a third roll to be ordained, quia (saith he) triplex funis difficile solvitur."

I have quoted thus much to show the mode in which the rolls in the Exchequer were made up in former times; but as the modern practice does not come within the present object of inquiry, I beg leave to refer for information on this head to the very able Report drawn up by Mr. Roberts, the deputy clerk of the pells, in 1800, and laid before His Majesty's Commissioners on the Public Records. I cannot, however, avoid noticing that part of Mr. Roberts's Report, as connected with the present inquiry, where he states, "That the want of space in the office wherein the principal duties of the clerk of the pells are performed, has necessarily compelled our predecessors and ourselves, when incumbered by increase of books, &c. to remove the most ancient and useless into the two upper rooms of the tower occupied by the clerk of the pells; they are deposited therein, for the most part, without order or method, and covered, by lapse of time, with dust and dirt. The collection of more than a century, perhaps of two, are in general confusion."

Having premised thus much respecting the antiquity and condition of the records in the Pell office, it becomes a duty to give some account of their nature and contents. The Editor exceedingly regrets that he has not had sufficient time to make himself fully master of the subject; the extreme anxiety of the present Comptroller General to furnish the public with, at least, some information on this head, must therefore be pleaded as an excuse for any imperfections in the execution of the task.

NORMAN PIPE ROLL.

Nearly the first roll that was discovered from this rude and indigested mass was a Norman Pipe Roll, of the reign of Richard I., the only one, it is believed, known in that King's time.

The importance of this roll appears, when considered in an historical point of view, as furnishing information to illustrate, in an eminent degree, the domestic policy and close connexion that existed between England and Normandy, and also the foreign relations and intercourse with the continent of Europe in general at this early period. This ancient record would have been of great advantage to Mr. Madox in tracing the intimate connexion between the Exchequers of Normandy and England, in his History of the Exchequer; but he had no other data at that time whereon to ground his arguments, and draw conclusions, than merely a small fragment of an early Norman roll, discovered by Mr. Holmes, in the Tower, and since published by that able antiquary, Mr. Petre, keeper of the records in that repository; which, together with another fragment of a Norman roll in the reign of Henry II., discovered in the Chapter House some years ago by my brother, are the only specimens of such early rolls yet known.

ROLLS OF RECEIPT.

These are the rolls made out by the clerk of the Lord High Treasurer, or clerk of the pells, of everything received on account of the public service within the receipt of the Exchequer, and is called Introitus, or record of monies received. These records are written in Latin, formed and abbreviated according to the instructions given to the clerk of the pell in the Dialogus de Scaccario, written by Gervasius Tilburiensis, in the time of Henry II., and printed by Hearne in his Liber Niger.

Mr. Roberts, in his Report to the Commissioners on Records in 1800, speaking of these rolls of receipts, says,

" I apprehend the Pell of receipt, now called the Introitus, is coeval with the original establishment of a clerk of the pells, (which traditionally is said to have commenced in Alfred's time.) Certainly records of the receipts of the Exchequer were commenced in very early ages, and have been continued to the present day. I am of opinion they will be found in the Tower of the Pells in a complete series during the last century, and possibly of time more remote."

Many of these rolls for the reigns of Henry III., Edward I., II., and III. have been discovered, and they appear to be in almost a regular series to the end of Queen Elizabeth's reign, and for the last century are nearly complete; but, from the variety and miscellaneous nature of their contents, it is impossible to attempt any detailed account of them in the confined limits of a preface.

Rolls of this description found in the Pell Office:

Henry III. annis 4, 25, 41, 42, 43, 44, 47.

Edward I. annis 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 25, 26, 27, 30, 31, 32, 33, 35.

ISSUE ROLLS.

The Exitus, or Issue Rolls (as contradistinguished from the Introitus), are payments made out of the revenues of the Crown by the Lord High Treasurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer, commencing in the reign of Henry III., and apparently continued in a regular series to the end of the reign of Edward IV. Subsequently to the reign of Queen Elizabeth the payments appear to have been entered in books called Issue Books; but the rolls and books at present being unarranged, and the total want of indexes to the latter, render it difficult to ascertain the nature of their contents: of the former some idea may be formed from the one now selected for publication, and from the few extracts taken from both in the preface to this work.

ROLLS OF THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD.

A wardrobe account of the 28 Edward I., which in its nature is somewhat similar to the household rolls, was published in Latin in 1787, by the Society of Antiquaries, and edited by Mr. Topham, with an abstract and historical account of its contents, illustrated by explanatory notes, with the addition of a glossary. Much of his labour would have been spared, and the roll rendered intelligible to all, had the editor favoured the public with a translation; in its present state it can be understood but by few.

It is to be regretted that Mr. Topham had not a knowledge of the collection now under consideration, and of the discoveries since made, as he would not then have fallen into the error of asserting "that similar accounts of a later date are also extant in MS., but that none prior are known to be remaining." Earlier rolls have since been found; and we may hope, from the laudable exertions now making by the Record Commission, under the judicious directions of their secretary, Mr. Cooper, to rescue, and make known to the public, records which have lain concealed for ages, that a regular series of these valuable historical records may yet be found, to connect them with those already published by those who have made this species of record their peculiar study, and furnished the public with so much useful and entertaining knowledge from them.

The earliest household roll that has been discovered in the Pell Office is that of the 44 Henry III. during the period of the King's absence in France to complete his treaty with Lewis IX., the French King, while Richard Earl of Gloucester and others were carrying on their dissensions at home.

This roll forms a diary of the King's expenses whilst in France and England, which are added up every day and week; it also gives authentically his route and stay at each place, the time of his embarkation, &c., commencing on Tuesday the 28th October, at Westminster; whence the King proceeded to Feversham, Whitsand, and Dover, where he embarked on the 13th November; which exactly agrees with Holinshed's account of this monarch's progress. We are then enabled to trace the King's route from Boulogne to Paris, where he remained five weeks; thence to St. Omers, where he continued two months; and then on his route home, where he arrived at the end of the month of April. An account of the expenses of each department in the household is given, amounting in the whole to £7,500 for one year; which, according to Bishop Fleetwood's calculation of the value of money in those days, being 15 times more than at present, would at the time of the Bishop's calculation have amounted to the enormous sum of £112,500.

Other household rolls of a subsequent date have also been discovered, a detailed account of which cannot be here given; one, however, of a peculiarly interesting nature, must be mentioned, which contains entries that are to be found in no other roll of the kind, viz.

The Household Roll of Prince Edward, anno 21 Edward I., which, after giving the daily expenditure, and stating where the Prince sojourned each day, states what persons he had to dine with him, how long they stayed, their departure, &c. And there is also another household roll even more detailed in minutiæ than this, specifying the price of the provisions supplied, such as 5*s.* 9¾*d.* for a lamprey, &c. (See extracts from these rolls at p. xxxiv.)

LIBERATE ROLLS.

The next series of rolls are the Liberate Rolls, which commence in the fourth year of Henry III. These rolls contain precepts directing the payment of sums of money to the keeper of the wardrobe, the officers of the Exchequer, and for all disbursements of the Crown generally, and also orders to the sheriffs to deliver possession of lands or goods which had been extended.

The Rolls already found commence as early as the 4th year of King Henry III., and for the 38, 42, and 43 years, and are continued almost regularly through the reign of Edward I.

TRANSCRIPTS OF WRITS FOR PAYMENTS AND DISCHARGES, &c.

If the sheriff, or other accountant, was to have any sum allowed or discounted upon his account,* such allowance was usually made by virtue of the King's writ, or by writ or award of the chief justiciar, treasurer, or other officer; and these were called writs of allocate and computate. The Liberate Rolls are full of these writs, and sometimes dormant writs of allocate were issued for allowing portions of accounts from time to time.

The entries on the regal, or King's writs, of this class, furnish the most minute directions for the repairs of the royal palaces, chapels, &c., and are also important, as they show from the teste me ipso,† or witnessing clause, (which is also in the Liberate Rolls,) where the King sojourned at the time of executing the writs; for example, in one of these rolls in the Pell Office of the 23rd of Edward I., we find that the King was at Bangor on the 8th January, at Aberconway on the 8th April, at Bangor again on the 9th April, at Lammarys on the 28th April, and at Westminster on the 28th July.

* Madox, Hist. Excheq. p. 673.

† See Mr. Hardy's valuable remarks on the importance of this clause, in his preface to the "Close Rolls," p. xviii. Also the "Itinerarium Regis Johannis," published in the first volume of "Patent Rolls" by that gentleman.

ROLLS OF THE JEWS, viz.—ARRENTATION OF TALLAGES, RECEIPTS OF TALLAGES ON THEIR GOODS, PLEAS, PERQUISITES, AND AMERCIAMENTS OF THE JEWS, &c.

The Jews were grievously persecuted in England previously to 1290, when they were expelled the realm by King Edward I.; and the revenue of Judaism, and their Exchequer, were then abolished. Many rolls of accounts, as monuments of their wealth and persecutions, still remain in the Exchequer and Pell Office. Amongst other taxes imposed upon them, was a dism to fight for Christianity, in recovery of the Holy Land. They were frequently plundered and fined by King John and Henry III.; and in the 44th year of Henry III. the wardrobe of Judaism, near the Exchequer of the Jews, was broken open, and several books and rolls were stolen away.*

There was also a public chest provided to contain their charters, chirographs, or stars of compact. It is hoped that some of those rolls and charters may now be recovered. Rolls already found in the Pell Office of the 17, 44, and 56 years of Henry III., Edward I., annis 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 9, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23.

ROLLS OF AIDS TO MARRY THE KING'S FAMILY, &c.

Aids were rendered to the King by those who held of him in capite, and were usually granted for the purpose of marrying the King's sons, daughters, or sisters; making his son a knight, or to promote some great public advantage, as to ransom the King, or proceed to the Holy Land, &c. viz.

* Vide Madox, Hist. Excheq. p. 158.

Henry II. had an aid, to marry his daughter, Maud, to the Duke of Saxony, of one mark per fee, in the fourteenth year of his reign.

Richard I. levied an aid for the ransom of his person, when he was taken prisoner on his return from the Holy Land.

Henry III. had an aid, to marry his sister, Isabell, to the Emperor Frederick II., of two marks out of every knight's fee. Also another, to marry his eldest daughter, Mary, of 20*s*. per fee. Also another, to make his eldest son a knight, of 40*s*. a fee.

Edward I., anno 18. Madox mentions but one aid in this King's reign, to marry his eldest daughter;* he could not have been aware of the subsequent rolls in the Pell Office of the 31, 32, 33, 34 Edward I.

ROLLS OF SUBSIDIES, TENTHS, FIFTEENTHS, TWENTIETHS, THIRTIETHS, &c.

These were taxes usually levied on every subject, both lay and ecclesiastical, granted by Parliament to the King; the rates levied on the lands or goods were generally regulated by the urgent necessity of the occasions for which they were required.

The rolls of this class are numerous, the first commencing 1 Edward I.

An interesting one of this description is dated the 22nd Edward I., containing an account of the monies raised for the Holy Land, being a transcript of letters patent for raising such sums.

* Vide Madox, Hist. Exchequ.

ISSUES BY WRIT

Form part of the Liberate Rolls; and though the entries are in general short, many of them are of an interesting nature. The earliest that has yet been discovered is of the fourth year of King Henry III., which gives a list of the regalia received by the Treasurer and Chamberlains from the Bishop of Winchester, at Westminster; beginning with a gold Crown ornamented with divers precious stones, &c. (See further extracts from this Roll, at p. xxvi.)

ROLL OF PAYMENTS FOR BUILDINGS AND REPAIRS AT THE KING'S PALACE AND CHAPEL AT WESTMINSTER.

A Roll of this description has been discovered of the 43rd year of Henry III., which gives a most minute account of the expenses incurred for rebuilding, repairing, and enlarging part of the King's palace at Westminster, and for decorating and ornamenting the same, together with the sums paid to each artist and workman, specifying from whence the timber, stone, and other materials, were obtained.

(For the building the King's Mews at Charing Cross, and St. Stephen's Chapel, Westminster, see the Liberate and Issue Rolls of 4 Edward I.)

ELEEMOSYNARY ROLLS.

Some portion* of the fixed or settled revenue was generally consecrated to pious uses, and these alms were called eleemosynæ constitutæ, or settled alms. Very frequent allowances of this description are made on the Pipe Rolls to the King's almoner for pensions granted to the King's ministers, officers, and servants, and for various acts of charity and royal bounty in the King's household, disbursed from the King's wardrobe.

The earliest eleemosynary roll found in the Pell Office is of the 13th Edward I.; which, in addition to the alms and charity bestowed by the monarch, gives an account of the costs and charges for erecting the abbey of Vale Royal, and the abbey of Maynair; it also states the daily expenditure of the King's alms at Bereford, Worcester, Gloucester, Corwen, Beauchief, Hanepol, Stowe, Temple Bruer, Dunington, Chester, and many other places, specifying the monasteries, religious houses, and churches, in which such alms were distributed and for what purpose bestowed; many of which, as applied to superstitious uses, are remarkably curious.

ROLLS OF TALLIES RENEWED.

Ryley,* in his Pleadings in Parliament, cites a writ from the Close Rolls, 14 Edward I., directed to the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer, commanding them, upon the loss, or damage, of any tally, to renew or make another, taking care distinctly and openly to enter all such counter-tallies so made into two rolls, one for the treasurer, and another for the chamberlains.

The earliest of these rolls found is in the 1st Edward I., and that of the 20th to the 35th Edward I. contains the writ above recited. These rolls are important, as they supply the omissions in the tallage rolls which contain the tallages* raised on the King's demesnes, manors, serjeanties, escheats, and wardships, and upon boroughs and towns usually called donum et assisa, which also includes aids, scutage, and carrucage.

* Ryley's Pleadings in Parliament, p. 450.

ENROLMENT OF LETTERS PATENT, BOOKS, OF PRIVY SEALS, WARRANTS, AND WRITS OF THE GREAT AND PRIVY SEAL.

These books and rolls commence in the first year of King James I., and are continued in a regular series to 1834, including those of the period of the Commonwealth; they contain enrolments of all letters patent, granting offices, or payments directed to be made by Privy Seal, or warrants at the Exchequer. It is to be regretted that this valuable collection has no other index than merely that of persons, from which it is impossible to furnish any information respecting their contents; but from a casual inspection of the payments, they appear of an interesting nature, as the names of Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir Anthony Vandyke, the Duke of Buckingham, and Seignior Johan Baptista Gabelione, ambassador from the Duke of Savoy, are among some of the first that presented themselves to view. (See extracts at p. lvii.)

MISCELLANEOUS ROLLS AND BOOKS.

A MARSHALL'S† ROLL, or Roll of the King's Stud of Horses and Expenses of the Stable, anno 21 Edward I.,

* For the different modes of raising tallage, see Madox, Hist. Exchequer. chap. xvii, p. 480, 507.

† The Marshall was a general name for several officers that were employed about horses, game, &c. (Vide Madox, Hist. Exchequer. p. 30.)

containing the daily expenditure for the King's horses, stables, and stud, kept for himself and his court, attendants, &c., specifying the arrival and departure of the nobility, and other persons attending on the King, and where he sojourned at the time.

A Roll of the 22nd Edward I. is in the Pell Office, viz. the account of John de Sandal of the monies received and expended in the Welsh war; the army, at this period, being at Montgomery, under the command of the Earl of Warwick. The names of Lord William de Mortimer, Lord Robert Scales, De Astley, and the other commanders and captains, appear on this roll, with the number of soldiers they respectively had under their command, whether foot, horse, slingers, or archers; giving also the daily expenditure of each commander, and also of those wounded in battle, &c.

A Roll for working the King's mines in Devonshire, dated the 20th to 25th Edward I., particularizing the quantity of lead and fine silver obtained in his mines at Burland and Comb Martin; and also the expenses and mode of working the same, &c.

31 Henry VIII.—A Book containing the treasurer's and under-treasurer's accounts of all monies received at the Exchequer for the Crown in the 31st year of King Henry VIII., and of all payments made by the tellers of the Exchequer out of such receipts, viz. to all patent officers held under the Crown, with the dates of their patents; to the King's heralds and pursuivants, serjeant-at-arms, ecclesiastical persons, pages of the King's Crown, to all officers in the Ordnance department and Exchequer, to several other persons as messengers, &c., assignments to divers persons by tallies for wages, annuities, rewards to sheriffs, collectors, comptrollers, keepers of the wardrobe, and all other officers and ministers of the Crown, whose names are given, with short extracts from their patents. [This book is a beautiful specimen of the hand-writing of the time.]

A Roll containing an establishment for Ireland in 1608, consisting of the different officers and forces, with their allowances by the day, month, and year, viz. To the Lord Deputy, Treasurer at War, Marshall, Master of the Ordnance, &c., Physician, Surgeon, Officers provincial for Lynster, Munster, Connaught, and Ulster, &c.

There are also some hundred books of issues, orders, warrants, assignments, loans, subscriptions for raising two millions, in 1698, Exchequer bills, pensions, &c. connected with money transactions of the Exchequer, too numerous, and in too great confusion, for any account of them to be inserted.

Having now endeavoured to trace the history, and show the circumstances under which this collection of Records was formed, and also explained the reasons why they have not before been made known to the public, it may be considered necessary to give some account of their contents; but as this cannot be fully and satisfactorily accomplished for the reasons before stated, (the want of time and arrangement,) it has been deemed advisable to submit only the few following extracts, hastily gleaned from the rolls already discovered, as the best means of communicating some knowledge of the information to be derived from them, and of partially exhibiting the general nature and importance of their contents.

Extracts.—Henry III.

5 Henry III.—These are the regalia * which Eustace de Faucunburgh, treasurer, and the chamberlains, received from the Bishop of Winchester, at Westminster, on Thursday next after the Feast of Saint Dunstan.—A crown of gold entirely set round with divers precious stones; a rod of silver, gilt; a golden sceptre; a tunic with the upper vestment of red silk, with a collar and precious stones, in orfraies [or fringe of gold]; a girdle, with a buckle of gold set with precious stones; a mantle of red silk, adorned with precious stones; a gold ring, with a ruby; two gold brooches for the mantle and the upper vestment, (or Dalmatian,) in one of which is a sapphire, and in the other a pearl; a pair of new sandals and socks of red silk, with orfraies; two bundles of orfraies wherewith to fringe the King's sandals; also a pair of old sandals of red silk, with gold fringe, with a pair of old socks, embroidered with gold, which had belonged to King John; a tunic of white diaper, with a Dalmatian of red silk, and an old mantle of red silk; three swords, which were remaining at Corfe-castle, with leathern cases; two swords, with sheaths of red silk, fringed with gold; two pair of gloves.

Henry, by the grace of God, &c. Deliver from our Treasury to the Prior of Westminster, our gold spurs, which were made for our use at our first coronation at Westminster, which we have given for the new works of the chapel of the Blessed Mary,

* Craven Ord, in his Inventory of Crown Jewels of 3 Edward III., published in 1790, states that one of the first† lists of our crown jewels is contained in the letter of Margaret, Queen of France, to her brother Henry III. of England, dated 1261, when they were lodged in the church of the Knights Templars at Paris, which the said King afterwards gave his Queen Eleanor power to dispose of. Vide Rymer's Fœdera, Vol. i. pp. 410, 435. The date of this list now published is 41 years previous to that contained in Rymer, which on comparison does not appear to relate to the same jewels.

† An earlier list has been found by Mr. Hardy, and printed in his first volume of "Patent Rolls," recently published.

Westminster. Witness Hubert de Burgh, our justice at Westminster, the 19th day of November, in the 5th year of our reign.

10 Henry III.—Two hundred marks paid for the purchase of robes, at the fairs of Saint Ives and Saint Botolph, for the use of the King and his brother Richard.

* Author of the treatise "De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliæ."

† This is the first entry that has been found of the name of the Versifier or Poet, from whom probably the title of "poet laureate" of the present day takes its origin. A few particulars relating to this office may not be here misplaced. Degrees in grammar, which included rhetoric and versification, were anciently taken in our universities, particularly at Oxford, on which occasion a wreath of laurel was presented to the new graduate, who was afterwards usually styled "Poeta Laureatus." The scholastic laureations seem to have given rise to the name in question, and probably the inglorious title of Versifier gradually gave way to an appellation of more elegance and dignity. The French never had a poet laureate, although from the most early times the kings of England have always had a dependant called the King's Poet, or the King's Versificator. John Kay, who dedicated his History of Rhodes to Edward IV., terms himself his humble Poet Laureate; and this individual is supposed by Warton to have been the first who took that title.

43 Henry III.—Pay from our Treasury to Alberic de Fiscamp and Peter de Winchester, 500 marks for a cloth with pearls, man, soon after, went with his wife to the churching of the Queen, the King told him he was an excommunicated person, and forbade both him and his wife to be present at that solemnity; adding, that he had first corrupted his sister, and to avoid scandal had married her, and then went to Rome to procure the Pope's confirmation of this unlawful marriage. When the Earl heard this he was much abashed, and that evening, with a few attendants, left the kingdom.

[Another payment of the like nature.]

To Messengers sent to divers counties in England, with writs of the Great Seal of the Lord the King, directed to the sheriffs of the counties aforesaid, to arrest and take the body of *Sir John Oldcastle, Knight, wheresoever he might be found, and proclamation made for him to be safely brought into the King's presence, under certain rewards, contained in the same writs.

5 Henry V.—To Robert Rodyngton, Esquire, 50*l.* for money advanced by Richard de Coventry, to build a tower at Portsmouth, at the King's cost, for protection of the King's ships, and defence of the town and country adjacent.

5 Henry V.—Payments to Robert Leversegge, of 231*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

* Sir John Oldcastle was the chief of the Lollards or disciples of Wicliff, and a great favourite of the King, who tried every gentle method to bring him back to the church; but he was inflexible, and was burnt in St. Giles's in the Fields in February, 1418. Sir John Oldcastle was exposed as a buffoon character by some Roman Catholic poet in an old play entitled "The famous Victories of Henry V., containing the honourable Battaile of Agincourt," in which the scene opens with Prince Henry's robberies, and Sir John Oldcastle is mentioned as one of the gang. As Shakspeare appears to have borrowed some hints from this play, it gave occasion to the mistake that Sir John Oldcastle was originally the droll of his historical play of Henry IV., and that he changed his name to Falstaff.—Vide Granger's Biographical History, Vol. I., p. 38.

to purchase (among other things) cloth for the King's army in Normandy, and garters for the Knights of the Garter, at the Feast of Saint George, to be held in Normandy.

12 Charles I., May.—To Sir Peter Rubens, Knight, 3,000*l.* for certain pictures from him sold unto us.

The Roll now published is one of a series of those authentic documents which illustrate the manners and customs of a period when a monarch reigned who was celebrated for his conduct and bravery in war, and for his wisdom and prudence in civil and domestic affairs. It can scarcely fail to be acceptable to the historian and antiquary from the frequent mention of that monarch and of his sons Edward the Black Prince, John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and other nobility and renowned persons connected with the wars and sieges carried on in France and Normandy during this King's reign; as well as on account of shewing the daily expenditure in matters both domestic and civil, whereon future inquirers into our national history may rely as founded upon the solid basis of authority.

The following brief abstract of this record, presenting a few of the more striking particulars, may be acceptable, as the best means of affording an explanation of its contents. It should, however, be observed, that the extracts made are but few and partial, and that there are, not only many of a similar nature referable to the classification here made, but also others not noticed at all.

The apparent smallness of this account, which for the first six months amounts only to 78,516*l.* 13*s.* 8½*d.*, when contrasted with the establishments of modern times, leads us to reflect upon the comparative value of money between that and the present period; which, if it could be ascertained with precision, might be of real utility, as well as matter of curious speculation. This I shall not attempt, but leave the task to the more learned and inquisitive, who will find much assistance from Bishop Fleetwood's tables, before referred to, and from the calculations made by Dr. Adam Smith, and Dr. Henry, in their treatises on this subject; the result of whose inquiries appears to be, that the value of money at this early period was about 15 times that of our own era; it will therefore be necessary in examining this Roll to bear the above calculation in mind, and to multiply each article of expenditure by 15, to ascertain its present value according to the data furnished in the beforementioned able writers on this subject.

PRESENTS OF PLATE, JEWELLERY, &c.

The frequent references to plate, jewellery, and goldsmith's work, on these Rolls, as presents from the Crown to foreigners, and others, show that the royal treasury then abounded with wealth, notwithstanding the expensive wars in which this monarch was constantly engaged. In former ages our Kings were often compelled to make application to individuals for loans of money, and the regalia, plate, and jewels of the Crown, appear to have been the usual security, or pledge, for such sums thus advanced.

Payment for several Cups of Silver, gilt and enamelled, to the King of Navarre and his retinue, with the expenses of sending them, p. 222, 223.

A Silver Bason and Ewer with Gold Nobles, to the Duke de Gelrye and Duke d'Aubert, p. 130.

Silver Cups, gilt and enamelled, with gold nobles, to the ambassador, and others of his retinue, from the King of Navarre, p. 167, 285, 286.

A Cup of Gold, garnished with rubies and pearls, together with 100*l.* presented to Robert de Neymers, a German knight, p. 479.

A Gilt Goblet, enamelled, and 20*l.* delivered to the messengers of the Duke de Jene, p. 430.

A Gilt Cup to Matthew Clayson, a Flemish seaman, p. 480.

The various gifts and rewards made by the King and Queen, in money, to messengers and servants sent with intelligence and presents, and payments for remuneration of losses, were generally most munificent, and are by far too numerous to be mentioned. They are scattered throughout the whole roll, a few examples, therefore, must suffice.

To a Valet of the King of Scotland, for bringing a black courser as a present to the King of England from the King of Scotland, p. 145.

To an Esquire of the King of Scotland, for a similar present, 10*l.*, p. 151.

To Henry le Scrop, son and heir of Geoffry le Scrop, 200 marks, as a reward for his services in England, France, and Scotland, p. 361.

HOUSEHOLD PAYMENTS, SERVANTS, &c.

From the payments made on behalf of the King's household and servants, information may be obtained how the royal person was attended at court, at public festivals, and assemblies, in war and peace, and on his journeys, or proceeding to war, the expenses incurred to support the dignity and station of his family. The perquisites to each of his officers and servants attendant on him may also be ascertained by these payments.

The memorials of the splendour and manificence of the courts of our early Kings, as connected with the household accounts, are to be found in a Collection of the Ordinances and Regulations for the Government of the Royal Household, published by the Society of Antiquaries, in a quarto volume, in 1790. The heading to the first account published in that work so exactly coincides with the rolls now under consideration, it is inserted to show their similarity.

"Here ensuethe the rates of wages of peace and warre, expences necessary of officers, and other chardges, concerning the howshold of the Prince of noble memorye Edward the Third, as well in tyme of peace as warre; and also the nomber of soldiers, as well by land as sea, and shippes reteyned in the warres of the said Kinge; as by the parcelles of the accompte of Walter Wentwage, treasorer of the same howsholde, from the 21st daie of Aprill, in the 18th year of the raigne of the saide Kinge, unto the 24th day of November in the 21st year of the said Kinges raigne."

4,000 marks paid for the ransom of the King of Scotland, p. 466.

TO MESSENGERS, COURIERS, &c.

The Charges and Expenses under this head must of necessity be of a very miscellaneous and mixed nature, having reference to the particular business or concern upon which such Messengers were employed. Among these may be found many connected with the Embassies and Communications sent to the Court of Rome, and other Courts on solemn occasions; the wages of the King's Servants who were not upon the Marshall's Roll; the Expenses of those who were despatched into different parts of the Kingdom, to raise men for the King's Armies and Navy, and to purchase provisions for the same; the carrying Letters Patent, Writs, and Privy Seals to raise money for the necessities of the State, and delivering Summonses to the Clergy and Nobility to attend the King, his Council and Parliament, upon State Affairs, &c.

Messengers and Couriers sent to all parts of England to borrow money, and for Sheriffs, Escheators, and other Officers to pay the same at the Exchequer, p. 126, 234, 235.

Messengers and Couriers sent to all parts of England to the Sheriffs, Escheators, and other Officers, to make proclamation for the army of Robert de Knolles to repair to Southampton to embark, p. 126.

To Geoffry Styvecle going five journeys with the King's messages to the Duke of Lancaster at Calais, p. 409.

To a Chaplain with letters from the King to the King of Scotland, p. 371.

Messengers and Couriers sent to divers Earls, Barons, Knights, and others, to join the King at Orwell, and proceed with him beyond the sea to fight his French enemies, p. 458.

THE ARMY.

The military operations noticed in this record form a considerable part of the annual expenditure; they are chiefly confined to the wars in Gascony, Normandy, and France. These records throw great light on the constitution of the army at this period, and show the gradual decline of the feudal custom of furnishing troops by knight's service, tenures in capite, &c., in consequence of the introduction of the practice of employing mercenary soldiers hired by contract and indentures, made between the King, his captains, and leaders, to provide the same.

The army was composed of the Duke, or leader, who received £1 6*s.* 8*d.* per day, p. 99.

Bannerets, 8*s.* per day, p. 99.

Knights, 4*s.* per day, p. 99, sometimes 3*s.* per day, p. 119.

Men at arms, 2*s.* per day, p. 99.

Archers, 12*d.* per day, p. 99.

Hobelars, 5*d.* per day, p. 272.

Engineer of the war slings, 6*d.* per day, p. 339.

Armourer, £5. yearly, p. 48.

The common foot soldiers were brought from different counties of England and Wales, and trained where the property of the several leaders was situate. Others were brought from the King's foreign dominions in Gascony, Normandy, &c. Besides those under the immediate banners and guidance of particular bannerets, there were many who offered themselves and received pay from foreign parts; see page 480.

The various modes of raising troops in the different reigns will be found in Grose's History of the English Army, wherein he states that Edward III. imposed levies of men on the city of London, and the several counties, towns, and boroughs which could compound for money. This practice seems to have obtained in the preceding and subseqent reigns, and the troops so furnished were conducted to the army by one or more constables, of which there are many instances on this Roll.

The balista, or war-sling, bows, cross-bows made with horn, and other warlike engines and instruments, are mentioned at page 33; they were under the direction of a chief engineer, or "artillator," p. 339.

Of horses, either for war, riding, draught, or burden, many are mentioned, and some denoted by their colour. The greater number were hired at a certain valuation, and paid for in proportion to their use, or the injury done to them.

Payments to several renowned Warriors, for their Services in the War, &c.

* Among these are many that were the constant attendants on the King and Edward the Black Prince, in Gascony and France, and who were present with him at the battles of Cressy and Poictiers; for anecdotes of bravery, and their acts of personal courage, see Collins's Life of Edward the Black Prince; who, when speaking of the King's privately defending the castle of Calais against a treacherous attempt of the French to obtain it, states that the King placed himself and the Prince of Wales under the banner of the above-named Sir Walter de Manny, sallied forth in order of battle, crying, A Manny, a Manny! when the King obtained a glorious victory, after having fought hand to hand with Eustace de Ribemont, whom he rewarded with a circlet of gold beset with precious pearls.—Collins's Life of Edward the Black Prince, p. 31.

de Tamworth, p. 484.——Edmund de Mortimer, Earl of March, p. 486.——William de Montecute, Earl of Salisbury, p. 486. With very many others, most of whose names are connected with remarkable events in history, and whose renowned actions are celebrated by various writers, to whom the Editor must refer, as space will not admit their being noticed here. [See also the Index.]

Expenses for archers and armed men, going with the King beyond the sea, p. 7.

Commissions to divers Sheriffs, &c., to procure archers and men-at-arms for the war, p. 203; also to provide quivers and arrows for the King's use, p. 388.

To bowmen and archers, &c., in the fortress at Calais, p. 16, 54.

To John Duke of Lancaster, 5,466*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for the expenses of 300 men-at-arms and 500 archers, going with him in the King's service to Gascony, p. 99, 444.

To Edward the Black Prince, for 200 men-at-arms and 300 archers, going with him to Gascony, p. 119.—4,458*l.* paid for their expenses, p. 445, 446.

Payments to certain spies in the Duke of Lancaster's army, to watch the French enemy's movements, p. 493.

To Sir Walter Huet, going to Gascony with 200 men-at-arms and 300 archers, 1000*l.*, p. 142.

The Earls of Suffolk and Warwick, and others, sent to Cherbourg for the protection of the King of Navarre on his coming to England, p. 201, 202.

Certain German Knights offer their services to the King, to fight against his French enemies, p. 480; also Sir John Groughou, a Prussian Knight, p. 151.

NAVY.

At a period anterior to Edward III. the King appears to have had no regular navy of his own, but to have been supplied with shipping from the Cinque Ports and other maritime towns, as occasion required. It is, however, presumed that something like a fleet of the King's ships must have been in existence at this period, from the frequent mention of payments made to the Admirals of his North and West fleets, to the Surveyors and Masters of the King's ships and gallies, and to the commanders, captains, constables, and sailors navigating and fighting in the same. Some of the regulations for the navy, and the rate of wages paid to the seamen, may be collected from the following entries:—

Divers payments of seamen's wages in the King's ships, and divers other ships in attendance on the King beyond the sea, p. 2, et passim.

Payment of the seamen's wages for the passage of Walter de Huet, viz., to each master 6*d.* per day, each constable 6*d.* per day, each mariner 3*d.* per day; also 6*d.* per week extra on account of the dearness of provisions, p. 273.

Payment of seamen's wages for the passage of the Duke of Lancaster; same rate as above, p. 275.

Payment of seamen's wages for the passage of Robert de Knolles to Normandy, p. 168, 175, 135, 191, 196, 211.

The King's Serjeant-at-arms and other persons sent to divers ports to retain shipping for the passage of Robert de Knolles and his army to Normandy, p. 136, 160, 164, 196.

To divers messengers, couriers, and valets, sent with Letters of Privy Seal to all parts of England, to hasten the troops to join Robert de Knolles, to proceed to Normandy, and proclamation to be made for that purpose, p. 192.

Commissions under the Great Seal sent to divers Admirals and Officers, to retain ships for the passage of Robert de Knolles, p. 181.

Lord de Latymer appointed to superintend the passage of Robert de Knolles, p. 205. Lord de Nevile, Admiral of the Fleet, sent in his retinue, p. 206.

For navigating ships to Holland and Zealand, for the passage of Robert de Knolles, p. 149, 210. Regulations for payment of the seamen's wages in divers ports, p. 248, 249, 262, 264, 265.

Shipping to be impressed for the passage of Guido de Brienn and his armed men and archers, p. 437. Others sent for the protection of this fleet, p. 271.

Payments for ships, mariners, armed men, and archers to protect the King's ambassadors sent to the King of Navarre in Normandy, and on their return home, p. 183.

To Sir Robert de Assheton, Knight, sent in the King's ship to Cherbourgh, to protect the King of Navarre to England, p. 187. Many other payments on this occasion, p. 253, 277.

Goods of certain Flemings taken at sea, p. 179.

Payments made to seamen in the King's ships, armed men and archers at Portsmouth and Southampton, stationed there to resist the French, p. 255, 367, 376.

To the Captain of the Town of Portsmouth and others, for the defence of the same, p. 256.

Wages paid to seamen for the passage of Guido de Brienn beyond seas, viz., to each master or constable 6*d.* per day, each other mariner 4*d*, each hobler 5*d*, each archer 5*d.*, p. 272, 258, 260.

Payments made for shipping brought from Holland and Zealand with seamen, for the passage of Robert de Knolles; also to Sir Ralph de Polly, Knight, Vice-admiral of the North Fleet, and to other Knights and Esquires for protection of the said fleet—to wit, to each man-at-arms 12*d.* per day, to each armed man 8*d.*, to each archer 6*d.*; together with an account of the expenses for shipping 8,464 horses, at 2*d.* each horse, and of the minor expenses for planks, nails, iron, and other necessary articles then used, p. 267, 268, 269, 276.

Wages to seamen in the ship called the Saint Mary Cog; viz., to the master 6*d.* per day, the constable 6*d.* per day, seamen 3*d.* per day, boys 1*d.* per day, p. 402.

To the Master of the King's Gallies 6*d.* per day, p. 69.

To the Surveyor of the King's Ships 12*d.* per day, p. 343.

Payments for eight ships in the North Sea sent to resist the French and Danish enemies, and to intercept the messengers of the Kings of France and Scotland, p. 369.

Payment of seamen's wages for bringing the Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Hereford, and others, from Calais, p. 407.

Payment of seamen's wages and armed men to protect the Isle of Wight from an attack of the French, p. 229, 230, 232.

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS AND HOSTAGES.

Frequent mention is made on this Roll of sums of money paid for the ransom of prisoners taken in war, and also of allowances to, and treatment of hostages, and others confined upon state affairs:—

A Ransom of 10,000 marks paid to Sir Nicholas Loveigne, for Sir Hugh de Chastilon, a Knight of France and prisoner to the said Sir Nicholas, p. 445, 456.

Payment to Sir Roger de Bello Campo, Knight, for support of the two sons of Charles de Bloys, p. 394.

Allowance of 2*d.* daily to Sir John de Neville, a French Knight, prisoner to the King in the Tower of London, p. 214, 221.

Allowance to the Executors of Sir Thomas de Uvedale, for certain hostages sent from London to Calais, p. 326.

John Peck, John Child, Richard Chaundell, and others taken prisoners in France, and detained at Saint Omer's, money sent to them there, p. 344.

Walter de la Roke sent to divers places to treat for the release of certain French hostages, p. 394, 429.

CASTLES, FORTS, GARRISONS, FORTIFICATIONS, &c.

Under this head several of the above description are named, with the expenses incurred for maintaining them, and to whom the custody and direction of the same were intrusted, viz.:—

The Editor feels that some explanation (though he trusts not apology) is due to the public for having been the first to deviate from the usual plan of publishing Records in the abbreviated and barbarous Latin of the time when they were written, in which form they are intelligible but to those few persons only who have made this branch of literature their peculiar study.

The arguments in favour of placing the contents of the Record within the knowledge and understanding of all persons are so obvious, that it is deemed unnecessary to urge them here; those which have been adduced by others to show the advantages derived from translations in general, are presumed to be equally applicable in the present instance.

Some difficulty presented itself in rendering the ancient names of persons and places into modern spelling. By so doing the original derivation and meaning of many would have been entirely lost sight of, as in the names of De Mortuo Mari for Mortimer; De Bello Campo, for Beauchamp; De Sancto Botolpho, for Boston; Cornubia, for Cornwall; Cantebrugg, for Cambridge; Novum Castrum for Newcastle; Garderoba for Wardrobe, &c. To obviate this difficulty, the original orthography of the Record has been, in most instances, adhered to, and the names modernized only in the Index, which plan, producing both readings, will, it is hoped, be satisfactory.

A literal translation throughout the work has also been preserved, as it was conceived that the original sense of an official Record would be liable to be lost by any attempt at elegance of language or too free a translation; and reference can be easily had to the original Record should any doubt or ambiguity remain.

The Editor has not the presumption to suppose that this, his first attempt, is free from errors or imperfections, and he will feel grateful to any person who will point out such, or suggest a more complete and unexceptionable form; of such hints he shall be proud to avail himself in a subsequent volume of Selections he intends to make from the Rolls before referred to, which will contain those passages that may be considered of a more interesting nature as connected with history, some of which, though frequently mentioned by historians, have never been corroborated by the official Records and documents now under examination.

The Editor cannot close this Introduction without acknowledging the attention and kindness he has received from Ashburnham Bulley, Esq., of the Exchequer, during the progress of this work: also to his brother, Charles Devon, Esq., of the Chapter House Record Office, Westminster, he offers his best thanks for the assistance he has received from him.
